Sofie Oldroyd has experience in commercial litigation in both Federal and State court, as well as internal investigations, helping clients address sensitive matters that call for thorough fact-finding and sound judgment.

Before entering private practice, Sofie clerked for Chief Judge Bledsoe of the North Carolina Business Court. There, she worked on business litigation involving companies in a wide range of industries, including robotics, banking, construction, and healthcare. During law school, she externed for two federal judges in the United States District Court for the Central District of California, gaining early insight into federal court practice.
