Cheryl structures the documentation and due diligence behind tax-exempt and taxable bond financings so municipal projects move from approval to closing without missing a deadline.

Cheryl brings focused paralegal support to Dorsey's Public Finance practice, keeping complex municipal financing transactions organized, on schedule, and properly documented from start to finish. Her work spans the full lifecycle of a bond transaction — from drafting proceedings and collecting due diligence items to managing official project transcripts and maintaining project files — so that attorneys and clients can move efficiently through each stage of the process.

Cheryl's primary focus is tax-exempt and taxable bond financings, with particular depth in general obligation bonds and utility revenue bonds. She monitors deadlines across multiple simultaneous matters, coordinates client communications, and ensures that every document in a transaction record is complete and accurate. That behind-the-scenes precision is what keeps public finance closings on track.
