Jose structures and reviews UCC filings that lock in lenders' and creditors' priority positions before a deal closes.

Jose brings focused paralegal support to lenders, creditors, and financial institutions navigating the technical demands of secured lending. Working within Dorsey & Whitney's Finance & Restructuring practice, Jose concentrates on Uniform Commercial Code (UCC) filings — the foundational documents that establish and protect a secured party's legal interest in collateral.

For clients, that means careful attention at every stage: drafting initial financing statements, reviewing existing filings for accuracy and completeness, and confirming that security interests are properly perfected before transactions close. In secured lending, a filing error or missed lapse can jeopardize a creditor's entire priority position, and Jose's work is aimed at preventing exactly that outcome.

Jose also supports matters touching banking and financial institutions, real estate finance, and trusts and estates — bringing the same detail-oriented approach to each.
