Lucy Park structures wealth transfer and estate plans for high-net-worth individuals, family offices, and family-owned businesses—turning complex tax and succession challenges into lasting legacies.

Lucy counsels high-net-worth individuals, traditional and nontraditional families, family offices, and family-owned businesses on the full arc of wealth preservation and transfer. Her clients include C-level executives, entertainers, athletes, entrepreneurs, and investors who need thoughtful, integrated planning across generations and across borders.

On the planning side, Lucy advises on family investment vehicles, charitable giving strategies, and multigenerational and business succession planning. She also works with clients navigating premarital agreements and pre- and post-divorce planning, asset protection, and international tax planning—bringing a coordinated approach that accounts for both the financial and the human dimensions of these transitions.

Lucy advises fiduciaries and beneficiaries on trust and estate administration, probate, and pre- and post-mortem planning. When disputes arise, she represents clients in trusts and estates litigation, helping families resolve conflicts that can otherwise fracture relationships and erode wealth.

Her work with tax-exempt organizations rounds out a practice that spans both private and philanthropic wealth. Lucy advises individuals and tax-exempt organizations on the tax issues affecting charitable giving and the formation and administration of public charities, private foundations, and donor-advised funds—connecting clients' personal values to structures that endure.
