Minneapolis – 612.492.5329

Michael structures and negotiates commercial real estate transactions so clients can close with confidence and move their projects forward.

Michael brings close attention to detail and a strong commitment to client service to every stage of a commercial real estate transaction. Based in Minneapolis, he advises clients on real estate and land use matters, supporting them from early-stage structuring through closing.

Michael's practice spans commercial real estate and development and infrastructure work, where he focuses on solving practical problems and keeping transactions on track. He works to understand each client's goals and provides responsive support throughout the deal process.

Prior to joining Dorsey & Whitney, Michael served as an Associate and a Contributing Editor of the Mitchell Hamline Law Review.
